Dear General Walters:

Let me extend to you my appreciation for you finding time in your schedule to address the History Club here at the Naval Academy. Enclosed you will find five pictures which were taken by a Navy photographer of you during your visit.

When I told Lee Martiny that I was going to send them to you he asked that I enclose a tape which he had made of your address and I have done so.

In talking to midshipmen following your address I found a consensus that your's was the best received presentation we have sponsored. Several expressed an interest in having you deliver another address next year and I am certain that everyone in the department would equally welcome one.

Personally, I enjoyed your stories and have repeated them several times since. Again, thank you for consenting to give our program such a boost. I am,

Yours sincerely,

James C. Bradford

Dear General Walters:

It was indeed a pleasure to have you with us and to hear your outstanding presentation on "The Management of the Intelligence Community."

Your views concerning the organizational structure and resource management processes utilized by the intelligence community in allocating resources and insuring cost effectiveness were both interesting and stimulating. To have a speaker in your position who can relate to personal experience as well as factual information is a very rewarding experience for all of us and most beneficial in our educational program. The students were particularly impressed by your candid responses to the questions concerning the impact of recent congressional probes into intelligence operations.

Thank you for sharing your time, knowledge, and experience with us; your assistance and interest in the College are much appreciated.

Sincerely,
